

Nature in Berlin

The green sides of the city

59 % of Berlin comprises green spaces – an area larger than the city of Cologne.

2.500 parks and green spaces to enjoy.

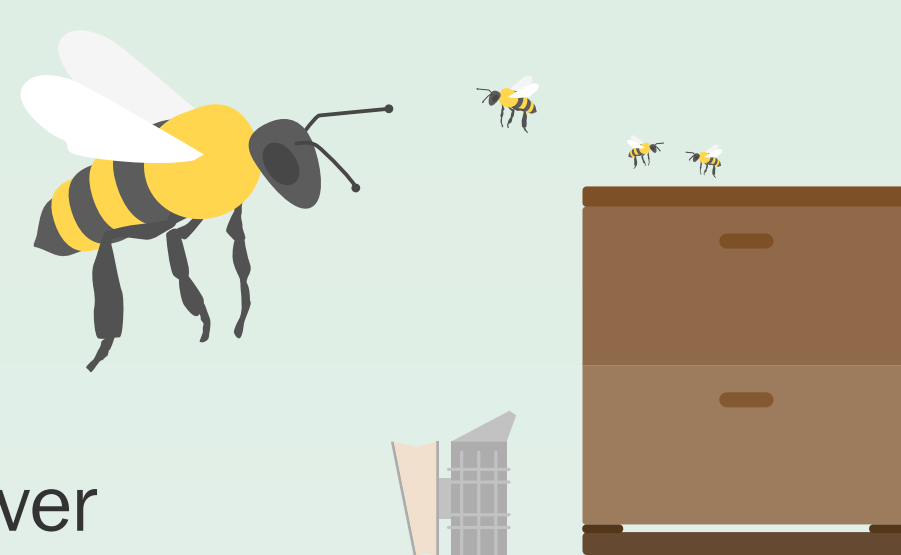

Even Goethe once sat in the shade of the 900-year-old „Dicke Marie“, Berlin's oldest tree.

Approx.

430,000 streetside trees
a breath of fresh air.

At a height of 115 m, Berlin's highest hill* is the Große Müggelberg in the Köpenick Müggelberg hills.

Over 7.000 bee colonies supply many urban beekeepers with honey.

The green urban jungle:
15,775 hectares of woodland covering $\frac{1}{5}$ of Berlin's urban space, an area larger than the city of Bonn.

5.847 hectares of water or 6.6 % of Berlin's city area. Combined, this would create a lake large enough to cover the boroughs of Mitte (39.5 km²) and Friedrichshain-Kreuzberg (20.4 km²).

Around 80 lakes and bathing lakes – well worth a visit any time of the year.

With 39 official bathing sites across the city, summer fun is guaranteed.

Berlin has over 50 islands in its many lakes and the Spree and Havel rivers.

Peacock Island is part of UNESCO World Heritage – a fairy-tale setting with a little palace and free-roaming peacocks.

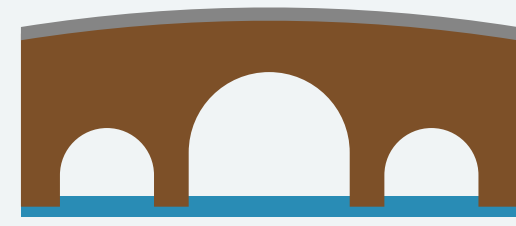

740 hectares

Berlin's largest lake is the Müggelsee in Treptow-Köpenick.

0.3 hectares

The Pechsee, Berlin's smallest lake, can be found deep in Grunewald forest.

960 bridges – more than twice as many as in Venice.

Little Venice

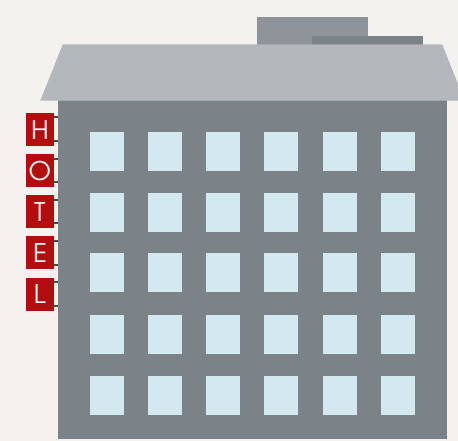

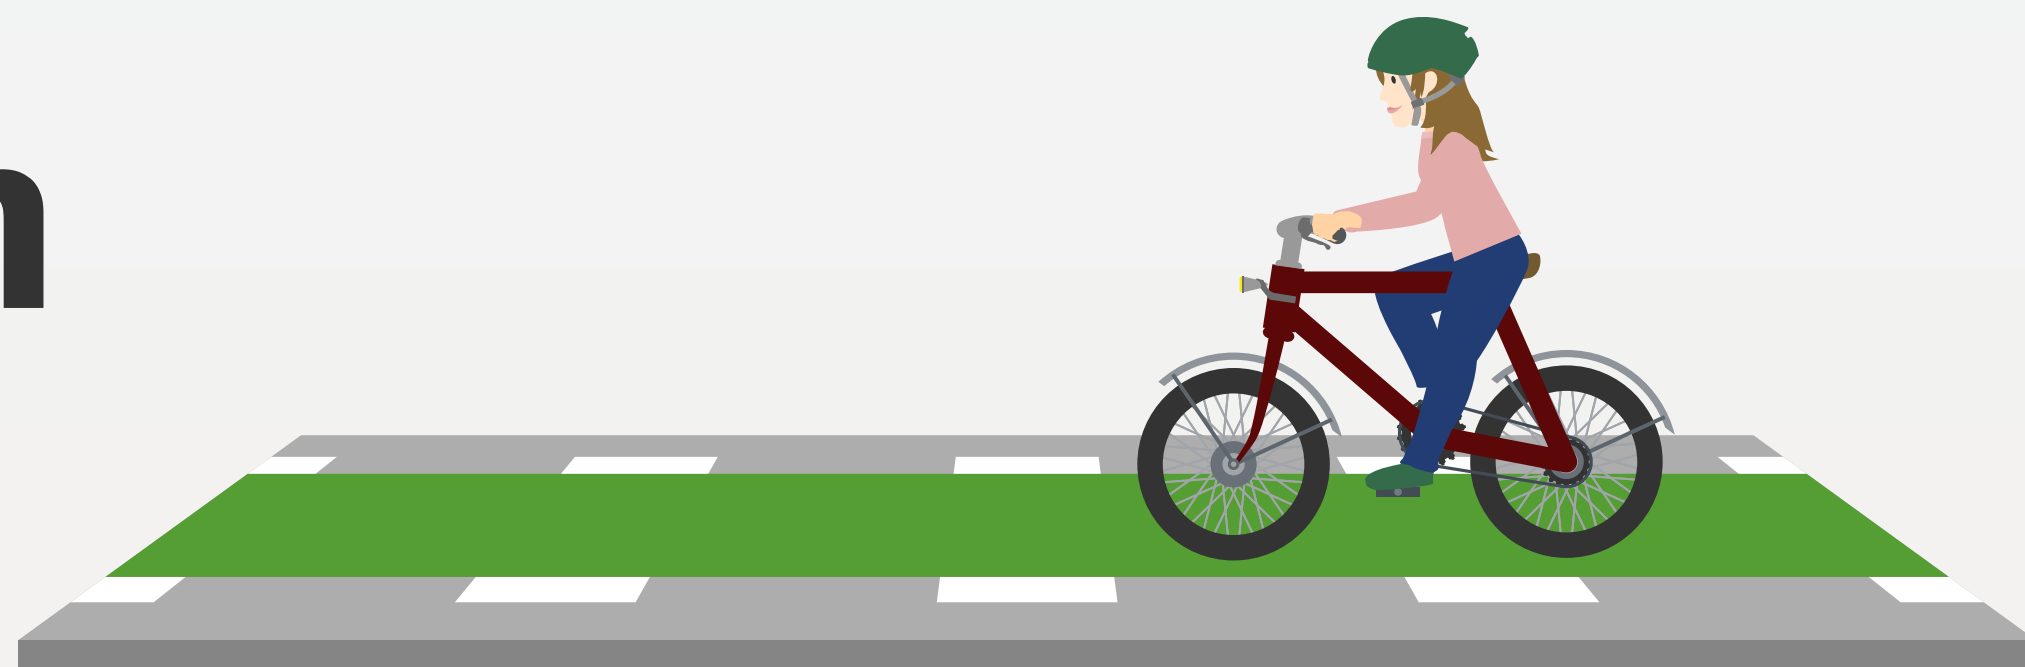

Berlin boasts two Venices – one on the Havel and the other on the Müggelspree.

New Venice

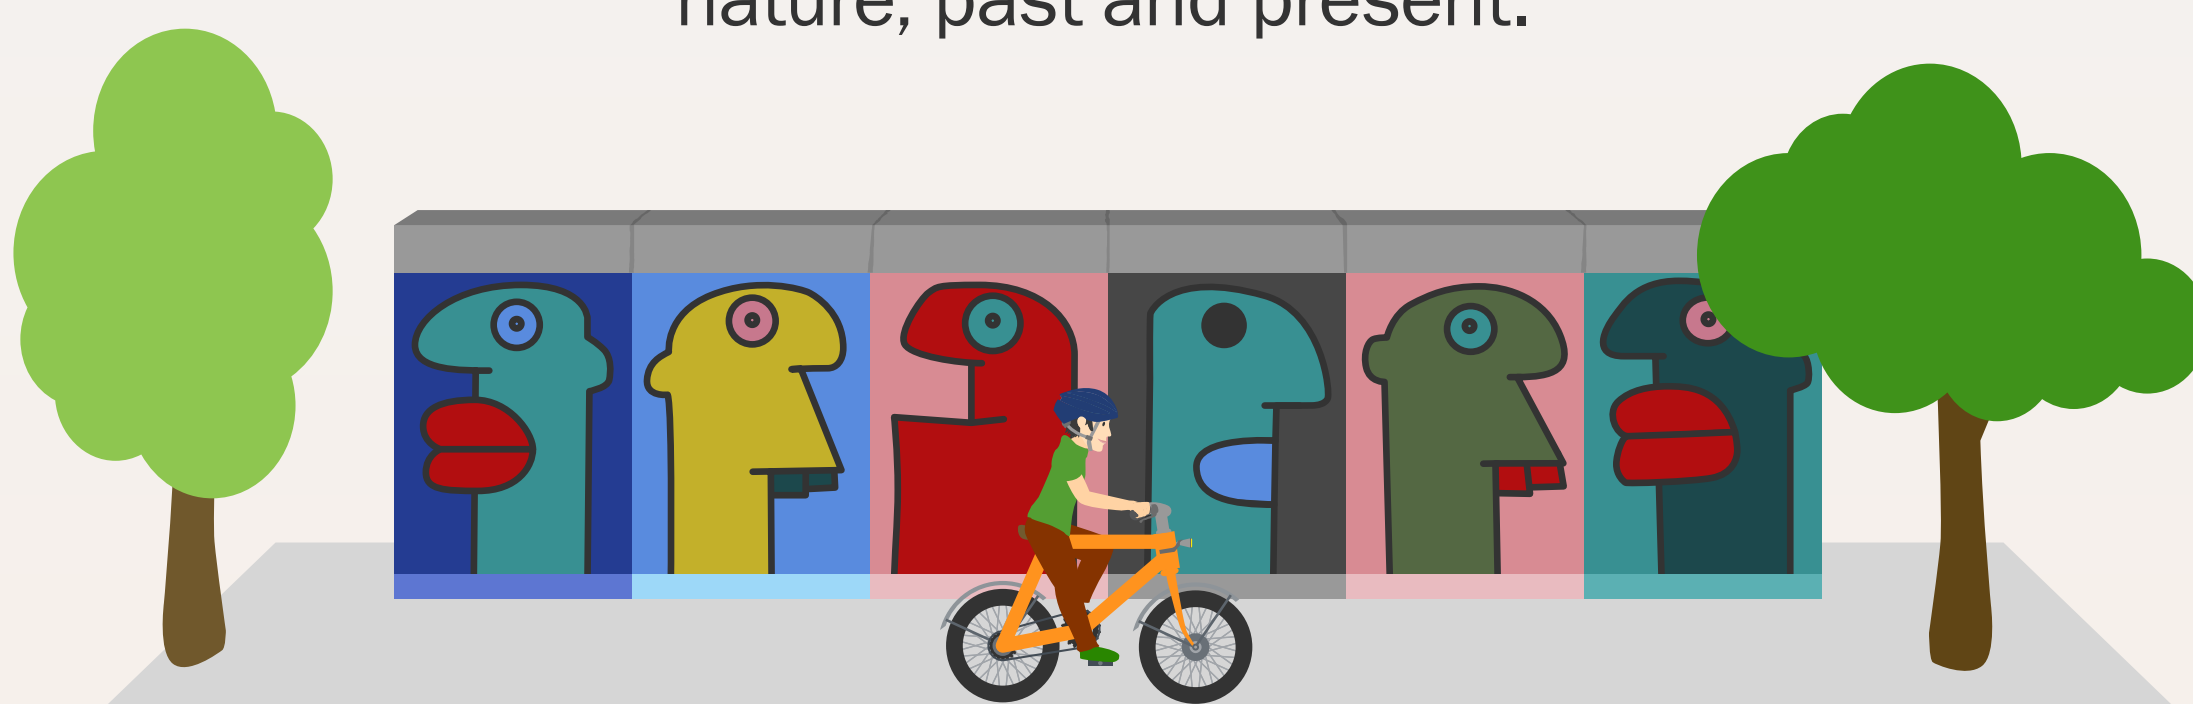

1120 km

of cycle paths to explore the city.

Cycling fans can find over 40 hotels in Berlin with special offers for cyclists.

The Berlin Wall Trail stretches over 160 km offering a unique and varied tour of Berlin's city and nature, past and present.

*natural elevation

Sources
statista.com (2016), berlin.de, seen.de, klassewasser.de, badegewaesser-berlin.de, wordpress.imkerverband-berlin.de, kellertuer.com, wassersport-verband.de, gruen-berlin.de (März 2020)